Handsome White Marble Structure Occupied Yesterday.

Design of Interior Is Both Beautiful and Convenient.

Tomorrow the National Metropolitan Bank will begin business in its new come, the handsome white marble structure on Fifteenth street, opposite the Treasury building.

Up to the closing hour yesterday, the bank did business in its quarters next door to the new nome. But in the after-noon the officials and employes of the bank, with a band of holpers, got busy and moved into the new structure. At dark last night, the moving was prac-

Although the exterior of the building has been admired for some weeks past, the feature of interest is the banking room. This room is the result of much careful study, and it now presents a beautiful and imposing sight.

Interior Design Rich.

The object of the architects and officers of the bank was to secure a banking room arranged with the maximum efficiency, both in regard to the internal work of the bank and the con venience of its customers. The main idea, which has been notably conceived idea, which has been notably conceived and carried out in this room, was to have in this bank an interior worthy of the high position which this institution holds. Therefore, the design is rich, yet simple and dignified. The materials chosen are enduring marble and bronze; there is no sham work here.

It was necessary to so design the building that, although on the ground floor of a high building, shut in on both sides by adjoining structures, it should have good natural light and ventilation, and should not present a gloomy interior.

This has been attained by large windows at the front and rear and by a large central court, giving a flood of light through the vaulted skylight.

The entrance to the bank through the broad vestibule leads into a large public space 19x5? feet, around which on all sides are arranged the offices of the bank officials, tellers, and other departments of the bank.

The floor is paved with white Alabama marble, with inlaid discs and patterns of Skyros marble from Greece.

structure above are of Tinos marble from Greece, while the counter screen separating the public from the banking space is formed by a colonnade of en-gaged columns and cornice of Skyros and Alabama marble, with grilles of and Alabama marble, with grilles of antique bronze.

The vaulted skylight and large window on the court are glazed with leaded glass of Roman design, whose colors harmonize with the colored marbles and the decorations of the richly modeled ceiling. The court window is balanced on the opposite side of the room by mirrors with cleverly designed borders of colored glass, so that one standing in the public space seems to see windows at either side of the building.

A feature of the room is the stone encased vault, with its huge circular door, which, being directly opposite the main entrance, immediately catches one's eye.

Special arrangements have been made right of the entrance.

RUSSIA LESSENS HEBREWS' RIGHTS

BERLIN, Oct. 12.-The Russian senate has issued a decision which has the Dr. Quinton, of Paris, who is making of the concessions made toward religious liberty during the last two years.

According to the Czar's manifesto of April, 1905. converts to the Greek Ortholox Church are at liberty to return to dox Church are at liberty to return to their former religion without fear of punishment. For two years this has been assumed to mean that such persons would be allowed to retain any privileges they had gained by joining the state church. In particular, Christianized Hebrews who return to their old faith were allowed to live in any part of the empire they choose.

The senate now declares that Christianized Hebrews must return to the condition of subjection in which they lived prior to their convertion. This means that they must quit at once any part of the empire outside the Hebrew pale. Under this decision, some 5,000 Hebrews are llable to instant expulsion from their present place of residence.

As the senate is only nominally a high court, and in reality takes its orders from M. Stolypin, this decision inchanged in its attitude, and that a new policy of persecution is to be Laugurated.

METROPOLITAN BANK Times Coin Problem Puzzling to Scores; Answers Poured In

THE PROBLEM

A man having ten coins found he was unable to change a single piece of money.

After borrowing three silver coins, he changed a certain coin, returned three silver coins to the man from whom he had borrowed, and then had three coins, of the same denomination, left.

What coins did he have at first, what coins did he borrow, what did he change, what coins did he return, and what did he have left? All coins were in common circulation.

THE PRIZE SOLUTION

Submitted by John S. May, 613 B St. Northeast

The man had a $2.50 gold piece, a silver dollar, a 50-cent piece, a 25-cent piece, three dimes, and three pennies.

He borrowed three 25-cent pieces. He then had a $2.50 gold gold piece, a silver dollar, a 50-cent piece. four 25-cent pieces, three dimes, and three pennies.

He changed a $5 gold piece, using a $2.50 gold piece, the silver dollar, the 50-cent piece, and the four quarters.

He returned the three dimes and had remaining the $5 gold piece, which he had changed, and three pennies.

Finance and figures are attractive to the public. This is one reason why hundreds upon hundreds of answers were received by The Sunday Times last week to its coin problem.

These answers poured in on the Problem Editor from last Monday morning until last midnight. Many correct answers were sent.

The beauty of the problem of last week was that it could be solved in many ways, while the best way was the one desired by the Problem Editor.
